VESPERS OF 1610

(Vespro della Beata Vergine, 1610)

THE COMPOSER

In the history of Western music Claudio Monteverdi occupies an important position at the threshold between Renaissance and Baroque, and his Vespers of 1610, as the compilation of music for the evening service on Marian feast days is often referred to, represents a milestone in the development of modern music. Monteverdi’s unique fusion of the traditions of late Renaissance church music with a modern approach to composing music in response to words and emotions results in a monumental masterpiece that is widely regarded as the most significant work of sacred music before JS Bach.

When the Vespro della Beata Vergine (Vespers of the Blessed Virgin) was published in Venice in 1610, Monteverdi had been in the service of the Duke of Mantua for almost twenty years, an employment he had not always found rewarding. His conviction that music should be emotive and match the text developed during his early years in Mantua while working alongside Giaches de Wert, composer to the Gonzaga court, whom he admired and tried to emulate. Monteverdi became a supreme composer of madrigals, renowned for his expressive writing in this small musical form. He built on an existing tendency, moving away from polyphonic equality between the voices to a monodic style which favoured one voice singing a distinct melodic line with accompaniment, thus providing soloists with the opportunity to embellish and dramatize the text and display their own virtuosity. Developing this further he began to compose operas: L'Orfeo (1607) and L'Arianna (1608) were performed to great acclaim and proved his skills in constructing works on a large scale.

At the time Monteverdi’s expressive madrigal writing was attacked for breaking the rules of counterpoint with harmonic and structural irregularities and ‘imperfections’. Monteverdi defended himself by setting out the characteristics of a first and second practice (prima pratica, seconda pratica), an old and a new way of composing music, equally valid and able to coexist. As he explained using this simplifying dichotomy, the perfection of the part-writing was the ultimate goal of composition in the first practice, whereas in the second practice the music served the text and strove to express the meaning of the words. These two different styles, he claimed, were equally appropriate, albeit for different ends. Monteverdi was keen to demonstrate his mastery in both styles.

The Vespro della Beata Vergine was published together with a Mass, the Missa in illo tempore, in which Monteverdi proved his sure handling of the old style of polyphonic sacred music preferred by the Roman Catholic Church. In the Vespers, by contrast, he displayed a whole range of compositional techniques that combined traditional elements of church music such as plainchant and double choirs (cori spezzati) with more modern practices such as echo effects and the part-improvised accompaniment called basso continuo, as well as expressive means that he had helped to develop in a secular context. These included virtuoso music for solo singers and instrumentalists combined with a modern, tonal soundworld including dissonance and chromaticism.

We do not know when exactly Monteverdi composed the music that makes up his first mature collection of sacred music and for what purpose, whether he conceived the Vespers as a unified work or intended the individual parts for flexible use. There are no documents to indicate where, when and in what form they might have been performed.
The title page of the volume contains a dedication to Pope Paul V, and the composer seems to have travelled to the Vatican to present it to him in person. If he had hoped for a favour, either in the form of a new post in Rome or acceptance of his son into the Roman seminary, he was to be disappointed. However, Monteverdi eventually did succeed in finding new employment with the help of this portfolio demonstrating his wide-ranging abilities in composing sacred music. In fact, it gained him one of the most prestigious appointments of that time in Italy, when in 1613 he became the new maestro di cappella at St Mark’s Venice. Here we have a record mentioning the print of 1610 as proof of Monteverdi’s qualification. He remained at St Mark’s until the end of his life.

THE VESPERS OF 1610

The term Vespers refers to the sung early evening prayer in the Catholic Church, the sixth of seven services prescribed in the daily order of worship. Vespers on feast days devoted to the Blessed Virgin Mary include five psalms, the hymn Ave maris stella and the Magnificat, the Virgin Mary’s song of praise. In each of these parts of the liturgy Monteverdi builds varied and innovative musical structures around the traditional plainchants. He embeds the single vocal line holding the long notes of the cantus firmus into the complex structures of the other voices which divide into up to ten parts, a highly original and ambitious fusion of old and new sacred music.

In a liturgical context psalms are usually preceded and followed by antiphons (short chants) which vary according to the specific Marian feast day. But Monteverdi intercalates five non-liturgical solo movements, or ‘sacred concertos’, in the print order. Whether these were meant to substitute or complement the antiphons is a matter of controversy amongst scholars, and performers have to choose between various possibilities. Two of these solo pieces, Nigra sum and Pulchra es, are settings of texts from the erotically charged Song of Songs, the Old Testament’s Song of Solomon which has come to be allegorically linked to the love for Mary. The Duo Seraphim, by contrast, evokes the Holy Trinity and is associated with Saint Barbara, patron saint of the Gonzaga family. The fourth of the sacred concertos, Audi caelum, is an echo aria which ends with six voice-parts singing. There is a sense of progression in the order of these four motets, as they begin with a solo voice, followed by a duet, then a duet that becomes a trio, and finally a solo that grows into a six-voice choir. This sequence shows the sense of climax of an experienced opera composer. The fifth intercalated concerto, the Sonata sopra Santa Maria, is a virtuoso instrumental piece over a soprano chant; its position within the whole work has been the most disputed.

The print of 1610 also offers an alternative setting for the Magnificat, for six rather than seven voices and organ accompaniment instead of an instrumental ensemble. This makes it possible to perform not only the full Vespers with larger vocal forces and a substantial instrumental ensemble, but also a reduced version with only a small choir and an organist. Jeffrey Kurtzman, editor of the Vespers score used in today’s full performance, underlines the ‘multi-use concept’ of the original print, in line with the flexible liturgical practices of the time. The full Vespers requires highly skilled musicians including solo singers and would thus have been suitable for a grander occasion, such as a high Marian feast day.

The possibility of flexible use does not mean that the Vespers lacks unity. It amounts to a unified work, held together by the way the liturgical movements all incorporate plainchant. This structural device lends a sense of coherence to the work as a whole. Another characteristic running through the entire work is the great contrast between intimate solos and the grandest of choral and instrumental writing which creates dramatic tension, while the increasing number of voices in the sequence of the solo movements provides a sense of direction. Nonetheless, the range of possibilities that Monteverdi’s score offers means that each performance will be different.
Domine ad adjuvandum

Right from the start Monteverdi sets up the interplay between sacred and secular music that characterizes the whole Vespers. He begins with an ‘overture’ where the chanting of the sacred text by the whole choir on one chord (falsobordone), powerful in its utter simplicity, is underlaid with lively instrumental music that uses the opening fanfare from his opera L’Orfeo. Each section of heavy chant and energetic fanfare is followed by a light, dance-like ritornello (an instrumental interlude) in triple time until, in the closing section, the choir joins the instruments in a joyful ‘Alleluia’.

Domine, ad adjuvandum me festina.

O Lord, make speed to save me:
O Lord, make haste to help me.

Glória Patri et Filio
et Spiritui Sancto,
sicut erat in principio et nunc et semper
et in saecula saeculorum. Amen.
Alleluia.

Dixit Dominus
The assertive, almost belligerent character of the psalm is underlined by a variety of musical devices: polyphonic development of the first chant, rhythmically pronounced passages alternating with unified chordal chanting, short instrumental interludes, and more expressive solo singing over a steady long-note plainchant. The tonally different ‘Glória Patri’ is sung by a solo tenor, followed by four vocal lines chasing each other, insisting on the words ‘in saecula saeculorum’ against the highest and the lowest voices holding the long notes of the plainchant.

Dixit Dominus Domino meo: Sede a dextris meis,
donc ponam inimicos tuos
scabellum pedum tuorum.
Virgam virtutis tuae emittet
Dominus ex Sion:
dominare in medio inimicorum tuorum.

The Lord said unto my Lord:
Sit thou at my right hand,
until I make thine
enemies thy footstool.
The Lord shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion:
rule thou in the midst of thine enemies.
Tecum principium in die virtutis tuae in splendoribus sanctorum: ex utero, ante luciferum, genui te.
Juravit Dominus et non poenitebit eum: Tu es sacerdos in aeternum secundum ordinem Melchisedech.
Dominus a dextris tuis confregit in die irae suae reges.
Judicabit in nationibus, implebit ruinas; conquassabit capita in terra multorum. De torrente in via bibet; propterea exaltabit caput.

Thine shall be the dominion in the day of thy power in the splendour of the holy places: from the womb, before the daystar have I begotten thee.
The Lord hath sworn, and will not repent: Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedech.
The Lord at thy right hand shall destroy kings in the day of his wrath. He shall judge the nations; he shall fill them with destruction and smash heads in the populous land. He shall drink of the brook in the way; therefore shall he hold his head high.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit, As it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be, world without end, Amen.

Nigra sum

The first of the non-liturgical movements, this solo for tenor is based on a love poem from the Song of Songs which has become an allegory for Mary as the humble, beloved consort of God. It displays Monteverdi’s skilful wordpainting: he highlights the contrast between the sombre ‘nigra sum’ and the joyful, lively ‘sed formosa’ by an octave leap and sets ‘surge, amica mea’ to a steeply rising figure. The chromatic phrase ‘surge, surge, et veni, veni’ expresses passionate longing, in response to the rhetorical repetition in the text.

Nigra sum sed formosa
filia Jerusalem
Ideo dilexit me rex
et introduxit in cubiculum suum et dixit mihi:
Surge amica mea et veni.
Jam hiems transit,
imber abiit et recessit,
Flores apparuerunt in terra nostra, tempus putationis advenit.

I am a black but beautiful daughter of Jerusalem,
Therefore the king chose me and brought me into his chamber and said to me:
Arise my love and come.
For now the winter is past, the rain is over and gone,
The flowers have appeared in our land, the time of pruning is come.
Laudate pueri
This psalm rejoicing in the might of God is composed in sections differing from each other in rhythm, texture, tempo, character and performing forces, a style known as concertato. It is a piece of great contrasts: the full sound of eight-voice polyphony alternates with segments where the cantus firmus is set against florid, free-flowing duets for solo voices. Monteverdi’s wordpainting comes to the fore in the rising figures on the words ‘suscitans’ and ‘erigens’, illustrating how God lifts up the weak and raises the poor. The grand ‘Gloria Patri’ contrasts with the previous dance-like section, and on the words ‘Sicut erat in principio’ the music literally goes back to the beginning of the movement. The final ‘Amen’ is remarkable in that the voices drop out one by one leaving only two tenors to finish the psalm in ornamental style.

Laudate, pueri, Dominum;
laudate nomen Domini.
Sit nomen Domini benedictum
ex hoc nunc et usque in saeculum.
A solis ortu usque ad occasum laudabile nomen Domini.
Excelsus super omnes gentes Dominus,
et super caelos gloria ejus.
Quis sicut Dominus Deus noster,
qui in altis habitat,
et humilia respicit
in caelo et in terra?
Suscitans a terra inopem,
et de stercore erigens pauperem:
Ut collocet eum cum principibus,
cum principibus populi sui.
Qui habitare facit sterilem in domo,
matrem filiorum laetantem.
Gloria Patri et Filio
et Spiritui Sancto,
sicut erat in principio et nunc et semper
et in saecula saeculorum. Amen.
Praise the Lord, ye servants;
praise the name of the Lord.
Blessed be the name of the Lord
from this time forth for evermore.
From the rising to the setting of the sun,
the Lord's name be praised.
The Lord is high above all nations,
and his glory above the heavens.
Who is like unto the Lord our God,
who dwelleth on high,
and hath regard for the humble things
in heaven and earth?
Raising up the needy from the earth,
and lifting up the poor out of the mire;
That he may set him with the princes,
even with the princes of his people.
Who maketh the barren woman to keep house, a joyful mother of children.
Glory be to the Father, and to the Son,
and to the Holy Spirit,
As it was in the beginning, is now and ever
shall be, world without end, Amen.
Pulchra es

This love poem from the Song of Songs, adoring beauty and lamenting separation, is set as an expressive soprano duet. The melody is sung by one voice which is then joined by the second for an elaborate repeat. The music is embellished with ornaments, harmonic shifts and unexpected dissonances, highlighting the sensual character of the text.

Pulchra es, amica mea, suavis et decora filia Jerusalem, Pulchra es, amica mea, suavis et decora sicut Jerusalem, terribilis ut castrorum acies ordinata. Averte oculos tuos a me, quia ipsi me avolare fecerunt.

Thou art beautiful, my love, a sweet and comely daughter of Jerusalem, Thou art beautiful, my love, sweet and comely as Jerusalem, terrible as an army arrayed for battle. Turn away thine eyes from me, for they have put me to flight.

Laetatus sum

The beginning of the psalm is characterized by a distinctive walking bass reflecting the words ‘In domum Domini ibimus’. It stops at the word ‘stantes’, but returns in various places throughout the piece. Again in concertato-style, the complex composition alternates between six-part polyphony for choir or soloists and virtuoso parts for two or more voices. After a great variety of contrasting sections the chordal chanting of the words ‘Sicut erat in principio’ brings together the diverse strands of the composition, leading to a simple final ‘Amen’.

I was glad when they said unto me: We will go into the house of the Lord. Our feet were standing within thy gates, O Jerusalem; Jerusalem, that is built as a city for people to come together in unity. For thither the tribes have gone up, the tribes of the Lord: to testify unto Israel, to give thanks unto the Name of the Lord. For there are the seats of judgement, the thrones of the house of David.
O pray for the peace of Jerusalem, and prosperity for those that love thee. Peace be within thy strength, and prosperity within thy towers. For my brethren and neighbours’ sakes have I asked peace for thee. For the sake of the house of the Lord our God, I have sought good things for thee.

Duo Seraphim

In this exquisite motet, an evocation of the Holy Trinity, Monteverdi displays the whole range of his skills as a composer of madrigals and operatic arias. Two tenors compete with each other in singing praises with melodramatic trills, long melismas and excited rhythms, producing anxious-sounding dissonances by their interlocking ornaments, until a third tenor joins in at the point when the text mentions the Trinity (‘tres sunt’). The three voices, singing a triad on the word ‘tres’ (three), come together in unison on ‘unum sunt’, before continuing their elaborate song of praise as a trio.

Nisi Dominus

This setting for two choirs of five voice-parts each is remarkable for its rhythmic complexity. One voice-part in each choir sings the plainchant, while the other voices launch into a complicated canon in which the different vocal lines enter on the half beat. The effect of these cross-rhythms is a very dense texture that drives the sound forward, with only a few moments of rest where the voices join each other in a cadence.
The middle part, by contrast, is a traditional antiphonal setting in which the two choirs answer each other. The solemn ‘Gloria Patri’ is initially characterised by dark-sounding chromatic writing for both choirs before it reprises the busy music from the beginning on ‘Sicut erat in principio’.

Nisi Dominus aedificaverit domum,
in vanum laboraverunt qui aedificavit eam.
Nisi Dominus custodierit civitatem, frustra vigilat qui custodit eam.
Vanum est vobis ante lucem surgere:
surgite postquam sederitis,
qui manducatis panem doloris.
Cum dederit dilectis suis somnum.
Ecce haereditas Domini, filii;
merces, fructus ventris.
Sicut sagittae in manu potentis,
ita filii excussorum.
Beatus vir qui implevit desiderium suum ex ipsis: non confundetur cum loquetur inimicis suis in porta.

Gloria Patri et Filio
et Spiritui Sancto,
sicut erat in principio et nunc et semper
et in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

Except the Lord build the house,
they that build it labour in vain.
Except the Lord guard the city,
the watchman waketh but in vain.
It is vain for you to rise before dawn;
get up soon after taking rest,
you who eat the bread of sorrow.
For he giveth his beloved sleep.
Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord;
a reward and the fruit of the womb.
Like arrows in the hand of a powerful man,
even so are the children of the vigorous.
Blessed is the man that hath fulfilled his desire with them: he shall not be ashamed when he speaks with his enemies in the gate.

Gloria be to the Father, and to the Son,
and to the Holy Spirit,
As it was in the beginning, is now and ever
shall be, world without end, Amen.

Audi coelum

Monteverdi builds this tender motet in praise of the Virgin Mary around an echo effect, a device popular in opera and pastoral plays. The words of the solo tenor are echoed by a second tenor voice, but only in part, so that in an ingenious play on words ‘gaudio’ becomes ‘audio’, ‘benedicam’ ‘dicam’ etc., as if the second tenor were answering or confirming the previous statement. The solo parts are richly ornamented over a simple harmony so that the beauty of the tenor voice is able to shine. On the word ‘Omnes’ the full six-part choir enters and declares in joyful triple time that all will follow Mary’s path to eternal life, before ending in a slow and intense manner on the words ‘Benedicta es, Virgo Maria’ which can be regarded as the spiritual core of the Marian Vespers.
Audi cœlum, verba mea, plena desiderio et perfusa gaudio.

Hear, O heaven, my words, full of longing and suffused with joy.

Lauda Jerusalem

The highly complex setting of this last psalm divides the choir into three high and three low voice-parts grouped around the tenor line which has the plainchant, but in a rhythmically enhanced form. The text is set to a canon-like structure in which the different voices are following each other in quick succession on the half-beat. The result is a highly energized movement which comes to a majestic climax in the weighty ‘Gloria Patri’ where the soprano part takes over the long-held notes of the plainchant, before all voices follow their own paths again to the closing ‘Amen’.

Lauda, Jerusalem, Dominum;
lauda Deum tuum, Sion.
Quoniam confortavit seras portarum tuarum; benedixit filiis tuis in te.

Qui posuit fines tuos pacem, et adipe frumenti satiat te.
Qui emittit eloquium suum terræ, velociter currit sermo ejus.

Qui dat nivem sicut lanam;
nebulam sicut cinerem spargit.
Mittit crystallum suam sicut buccellas:
ante faciem frigoris ejus quis sustinebit?
Emittet verbum suum, et liquefaciet ea;
flabit spiritus ejus,
et fluent aquae.

Qui annuntiat verbum suum Jacob, justitias et judicia sua Israel.
Non fecit taliter omni nationi,
et judicia sua non manifestavit eis.

Gloria Patri et Filio
et Spiritui Sancto,
sicut erat in principio et nunc et semper
et in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem:
praise thy God, O Zion.
For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates: and hath blessed thy children within thee.

He maketh peace in thy borders,
and filleth thee with the finest wheat.
He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth: and his word runneth swiftly.

He giveth snow like a fleece,
and scattereth the hoarfrost like ashes.
He casteth forth his ice like morsels:
who can stand before his cold?
He will send out his word, and melt them:
he will blow his wind,
and the waters will flow again.

He announceth his word unto Jacob,
his statutes and judgements unto Israel.
He hath not so dealt with every nation,
and hath not shown them his decrees.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son,
and to the Holy Spirit,
As it was in the beginning, is now and ever
shall be, world without end, Amen.

INTERVAL – 20 Minutes
Sonata sopra Sancta Maria
The last of the sacred concertos gives the instrumentalists a chance to step into the foreground. It is an astonishing instrumental composition, set against a soprano duet singing a litany of ‘Sancta Maria, ora pro nobis’. This plea is repeated eleven times, each time in a slightly different rhythmical form. The Sonata requires true virtuosoic playing in each instrumental group. The melodic material goes through numerous variations in terms of rhythm, tempo and instrumentation. Monteverdi plays with contrasts and correspondences: the dark-hued sackbuts have the theme when the ethereal-sounding soprano enters with her first chant; the long-held notes of the litany contrast with the busy syncopated orchestral playing; in another section it is the singing which is disjointed and anxious while the more fluid instrumental playing, including a charming dialogue between violins and cornetts, seems to answer it reassuringly.

Sancta Maria, ora pro nobis. Holy Mary, pray for us.

Ave maris stella
This beautiful setting of the Marian hymn is in eight parts, divided between two choirs. All voice-parts sing the first verse together, whereas the following sections in triple time are sung by each choir individually. The basic Gregorian hymn tune is hardly recognizable in the modern-sounding melody, carried by the sopranos. In the next verses the tender, gently flowing tune is sung by different soloists, each followed by a ritornello played by a different set of instruments. The last section returns to eight-part polyphony and ends with a very still ‘Amen’.

Ave, maris stella,
Dei Mater alma,
Atque semper Virgo,
Felix caeli porta.

Sumens illud Ave
Gabrielis ore,
Funda nos in pace,
Mutans Evae nomen.

Hail, star of the sea,
Nurturing Mother of God,
And always Virgin,
Happy gate of heaven.

Receiving that Ave [Hail]
From the mouth of Gabriel Establish us in peace,
Transforming the name of Eva [Eve].
Magnificat

The canticle of Mary brings the Vespers of 1610 to a magnificent close. In the manner of a grand finale Monteverdi recapitulates the various compositional devices explored in the previous parts of the work and shows once again the mixture of styles he is able to integrate into a sacred composition.

He sets each of the twelve verses of the text in a different way, with different vocal and instrumental forces. The unifying element is the prominent plainchant that wanders through the voices, sometimes complementing solo voices in a duet, sometimes woven into the choral structure, and at other times set over florid instrumental parts. In the ‘Esurientes’ section the plainchant is carried by a soprano duet singing a third apart.

The sheer variety in combining the archaic liturgical cantus firmus with modern, secular writing for voices and instruments is astonishing.
Other elements familiar from previous movements are the juxtaposition of contrasts, the walking bass, and a wealth of echo effects not only for voices but also for instruments. Dance-like ritornelli; splendid displays of instrumental virtuosity; quasi-operatic arias – the musical idiom in the Magnificat seems distinctly secular. But the omnipresence of the plainchant firmly grounds the composition in the sacred realm. The Magnificat comes to a close with all seven voices singing, doubled by the instruments. The slow ‘Sicut erat in principio’ is grand and imposing, reminiscent of the work’s opening bars. In a final contrasting gesture, Monteverdi follows this with a lively and joyous ‘Amen’.

Magnificat anima mea Dominum Et exultavit spiritus meus
in Deo salutari meo.
Quia respexit humilitatem
ancillae suae:
cece enim ex hoc beatam me dicent omnes generationes.
Quia fecit mihi magna qui potens est,
et sanctum nomen eius.
Et misericordia eius a progenie in progenies timentibus eum.

Fecit potentiam in brachio suo, dispersit superbos
mente cordis sui.
Deposuit potentes de sede
et exaltavit humiles.
Esurientes implevit bonis et divites dimisit inanes.
Suscepit Israel puerum suum recordatus misericordiae suae,
Sicut locutus est ad patres nostros,
Abraham et semini eius in saecula.

Gloria Patri, et Filio,
et Spiritui Sancto:
Sicut erat in principio, et nunc, et semper,
et in saecula saeculorum.
Amen.

My soul doth magnify the Lord,
and my spirit hath rejoiced
in God my Saviour.
For he hath regarded the lowliness
of his handmaiden.
For behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.
For he that is mighty hath done great things for me, and holy is his name.
And his mercy is on them that fear him from generation to generation.

He hath shewed strength with his arm;
he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.
He hath put down the mighty from their seat,
and hath exalted the humble.
He hath filled the hungry with good things,
and the rich he hath sent empty away.
He remembering his mercy hath supported his servant Israel,
As he promised to our forefathers,
Abraham and his seed for ever.
Glory be to the Father, and to the Son,
and to the Holy Spirit:
As it was in the beginning, is now
and ever shall be, world without end,
Amen.

Rachel Elliott Soprano

Rachel Elliott’s international career has taken her to venues as diverse as the Lincoln Center, New York and the Funda Community Centre in Soweto, South Africa. In addition, she has performed throughout Europe, the US, Japan, South America, Hong Kong and Singapore.

Following musical training at The Purcell School, Selwyn College, Cambridge and the Guildhall School of Music and Drama, she has worked as a soloist with many groups. These have included Les Arts Florissants, Il Seminario Musicale, the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment, the Academy of Ancient Music and Florilegium among others.

She has also spent much of her performing career as an ensemble singer, working for some years with I Fagiolini, as well as with Trinity Baroque and the Cardinall’s Musick. Rachel is always delighted to discover new and interesting ways of presenting great music. The Bach Players, based in London, perform and record Bach’s cantatas in combination with other music from the period, setting the cantatas within the musical context of his time. Meanwhile the Madrid-based ensemble, Hippocampus, has moved away from recording for CD and instead works with the Arsis label to produce USB flash drives, containing much more than just audio recordings.

Rachel last sang with London Concert Choir in performances of Haydn’s oratorio The Seasons in both London and Assisi.

At present, Rachel combines a performing career with class music teaching, choir direction and being a mother of four.
